The firing for a day or two has continued much the same as during the week, in fact during the fortnight past. The gunboats have remained lile, and but few of the morss, a large delegation of Border State tars have been in practice. The lat-mbers waited on him at the White ter enter upon their daily duties as use to remonstrate. They set forth vaammunition boats to their responsible from the position which he had tamed. The tediam of the weary hours was relieved somewhat to-day by a short trip up the river along the Missouri shore. About eight o'clock this morning, the pilot of the flag ship, with a picked and well armed crew, came along side, with orders the coup to James's Bayou, side, with orders to go up to James's Bayou, distant some six miles, for reconnoitering pur-poses of a character which I cannot detail, as it would convey comfort and information to the information to the Island long before our re-urn. There is a wide passage way through the lower story of the house from froat to rear, which affords better from the blasting sun, and allow a cool draft at all times of the day and night. Heavy versuches, an arched projecting root, and chimneys upon the outside, also subserve the same purposes. Burrounding the house recabins capable of accommodating a dozen negro families. The specious barn and cribs has filled to overflowing with corn, and from eighty to a hundred horses and mules stand fetlock deep in the watery barnyard. There are no other signs of life about the plantation, however; owner and negroes have departed to some nuknown destination within the plantation,

Thus we steam along until we reach James's Bayou, a wide creek setting inland from the river for some three or four miles, then losing itself in a dense cypress was made, deep slough, emptying opposite New Madrid. The pilot and his crew start off in their yawi, reconnoitering down the bayen and we are left to admire the beauties of the settlement at this point.

The place is familiar to all river men. In summer it has been a regular landing for steamers where they have hid in supplies of provisions and taken on freights of corn; when horse reading was the fashion, and cutting and slashing with bowie knives the amusement of the day. In winter, when trade was dull, James's Bayon was was in its glowy. The results of the summer's trade went for whisky or were squandered at draw poker. The small vices were abundant, and the larger once not squinted at when occasion demanded. The war has been the rule of James's Bayon, however. No steamers stop there for supplies. There is no money to waste at draw poker, and the young men of the settlement have been impressed into the rebel service, so that it looks

Mr. COLFAX was of the same opinion, but by this bill, without taxing advertisements, publications were taxed more than they ought to be. They pay more than their proportion on the articles used, and for paper, telegraphic messages, as light, &c. They might as well impose a tax on boarders at a hotel, or on lawyers for every criminal or cfril suit.

Mr. WRIGHT said that persons engaged in every branch of business, merchants as well as mechanics, were taxed more than newspapers, which ought to bear their just proportion.

Mr. COLFAX said that experience had shown that the English tax on newspapers and books was a tax on knowledge, and that the people demanded and scenred a reform in this particular.

The bank law contains several sections. One section provides that no more banks of issue shall be established in the State. nother provides that no bills under the tion of ten dollars shall be issued, of banks outside or inside the State; and after 1866 no bills of any denomination whatever. There is no excep-tion made in favor of United States Treasury notes, on which the Government now section provides that no more corporate ing in gold or silver coin, shall be created

Thus we have a nice medley presented to the people to be swallowed in a mass If you desire to vote for one section only, you cannot have the privilege. You must shut your eyes and take the entire dose It was argued by those who advocated the article in the Convention that it was necessary to sweep away the present banks of e, or they would have a monopoly of the business, the creation of all such banks being prohibited in the future. Then why not carry out their logic to its legitimate ion, and sweep away all corporations that now deal in money, in any shape or manner, in the State? Four young men from St. Louis, duck-hunting in St. Clair county, Ill., last Sunday, were esting their dinner by a bonfire, when one of them sportively proposed to shoot the other, and levelling his weapon (half-cocked,) at only five yards distant, the gun was discharged and the young man shot dead. The murderer—who alleges that he had no intention to shoot his companion, and did not touch the trigger—at once walked to St. Louis and gave himself up to the police. These are the main reasons which were adduced by Mr. Arnold and others of the West why the proposition should be accepted, and they, to our minds, are conclusive. They cover the whole ground. That included under the second head is of itself of weight enough to silence all debate, and at once to came the amendment to take the form of law. The Mayor and City Connell of Nashrile being called upon by Gov. And Johnson to take an oath of allegiance, have refused to do so because it was "unprecedented." Only one of the members voted to take the oath, and he did so because, as he said, "what Andy dipate the saves of all robots wherever victory affords opportunity; one of the passages quoted declaring us "obliged in conscience and by the laws of equity," wherever victorious, to rescue and restore to freedom "people whom our enemy had unjustly oppressed" and "spoiled of their liberty;" and thus obliged us "so to use our victory as not to give them a new master, but to break their chana."

Do our high civil and military agents claim, as some traitorous organs in our midst are claiming, that the Federal Constitution hars their execution of this emphatic and most claiming, that the Federal Constitution bars

Then let them learn, what any law student in

But the Federal Constitution no where procommand the army at Counth, is illfounded. Gen. Grant is his superior in

we are not at liberty to state what his strength is. We may say, however, that no army ever engaged in battle on this continent, with half the number of that which is at this day under the General's direction. We do not know how he will be opposed; but from the fact that all the remaining energies of the South have been drawn upon to make head against him, we cannot hope that the battle which

The Law of Nations, or the Buty of tation gives the Federal Government full power to wage war against domestic, as well as against foreign enemies; against its own citizens when in rebellion, as fully as against the subjects of the remotest nation of the earth. It thus gives it the power so to wage wars without any limitation or restriction, and of ciency of preparation, courage of men and skill of officers are sometimes powerless to destroy the effect of some unlucky accident, and that blind chance seems some-times to carry the day against brave y and science, we may not look upon a victory as

We are glad that the proposition to make the troubles growing out of this war the signal for the organization of a party with the lying label "Democratic," the object of which can be no other than to aid the It is an axiom of jurisprodence that the grant of a power to do a thing, is a grant of the power io employ all the means necessary to do that thing. The right of a constable to take a defendant's body, is a right to kill that defendant if that be necessary to the taking of his body. So, the right to carry on war is the right to deprive the enemy of his life as well as of his liberty and property; to do all those acts which the law of war, as a part of the law of nations, permits. Our Constitution content has the work of the law of nations, permits. Our Constitution content has the warmaking power with reference and in subordination to the law of nations. It thus adopts that law and makes it, a part of enemy by making war upon Mr. Lincoln's Administration, comes from one whose-sympathics for the rebels and the rebellion Vallandigham of Ohlo. Certainly there Vallandigham of Ohio. Certainly there can be no fear that a fellow whose loyalty is of the quality of his, car, though aided by the Chicago Times, the Payton Empire and other kindred prints, raily any considerable force under the doubtful banner that he will raise. It would, however, be neither inconvenient nor unprofitable to group together the rebel sympathisers in the North, to the end that there may be visited upon them collectively the indignation which individuals now escape by dodging around in the crowd. Vallandigham will do well to go ahead.

THE BEST METHOD.

There was an old schoolmaster in England, at Lichfield we believe, who, when complimented on his success in teaching boys, male a brief speech which may be commended to the politicians of our own time, who are for holding back the armies of the country, while the rebels are taught loyalty by buttered words. Said he, "I never taught a boy in my life. I whip and the boys learn!" This method of teaching grammar has gone by; but it is still potent for teaching rebels loyalty. Let the blows fall and the learning beerin.

his minor son!
But why elaborate the argument? We have which he tells the seen that the law of nations makes it the Article of the Cor dwy of our dovernment to cause emancipa-tion to follow in the footsteps of its conquests of rebel territory. Is any elaborate argu-ment necessary to demonstrate that wha law makes it its dwy to do, it gives it the right to do? How shameless, then, the pretence, whether set up by a member of Congress or

Again, as in the case of a people whom our eneasy has unjustly oppressed, the law of nations, not only bestows war powers, but imposes war duties also. Another of these duties is the employment of all those powers for winning success and thus compelling vesce as soon as possible. Is there a school girl in the land who does not know that the emancipation of the slaves of all rebels, even without arming them, would prove a most potent means to that end?

So our Constitution, in its adortion of the so our Constitution, in its adoption of the laws of nations, not only authorizes our Government to exercise all the war powers that haw confers, but requires of it all the war duties that haw enjoins.

Then is not the legal demonstration full and unanswerable that it is the constitutional duty of our Government and 'military representatives to emancipate every siave of every rebell in all the land, and to make the emancipation fully effectual as fast as conquest shall afford opportunity?

Each national public servant, from the cesident and General-in-Chief down through a Cabinet ministers and members of Consess, down even to the messengers in the Destruents, the saliors on the gunboats and the iddiers in the ranks, are bound by their soldiers in the ranks, are partnents, the sallors on the gamboats and me soldiers in the ranks, are bound by their soldiers in the ranks, are bound by their soldiers in the ranks, are bound by their soldiers and the charge their duties. Let them all see to it that they keep that oath in the case of the "people whom our enemy has unjustly oppressed" so long and so cruelly. Thus far most of them in high positions, and with opportunities to "break the chains," have violated that oath, not only in respecting and rejusing to "break," but in re-frething them upon thousands of the victims who had themselves broken and cast them off.

If they shall continue to do so, the whole body of the American people, in the next generation if not in this, and the whole people of the civilized and Christian world, henceforth will hold them to a stem reckoning; will visit their omission of that duty, their violation of that oath, with maledictions that shall ring down through the archway of the ages! father to the thought. The loss of the was father to the thought. The loss of the arms fell heaviest on the robel Contederacy. The men can be replaced. You are aware that it is almost impossible to replace the that it is almost impossible to replace the arms. We have had sufficient indications to positively prove this—fact mentioned here and spoken of very freely, I have not seen ineutioned. As early as December hat, Governor Harris of this State disbanded about 10,000 enlisted men, whom it was impossible to arm. He urged upon them to take pikes natil it was possible to furnish them with better weapons, but these 10,000 were not of the "die in the last ditch" men. Besides, there is nothing pleasant or agreeable in making a bayonet charge with place that making a bayonet charge with place that they ever even reached him. The language of the Richmond papers in regard to John Letcher's proclamation, calling out the militie of the State, would indicate that the same were to serve without arms. But it is not the part of wisdom to underrate rebel resources, and particularly at this time. The rebets, though they have lost Missouri and Tennessee and Kentucky and Virginia—though ten thousand armed men have been captured at Donelson, are to-day stronger than they were when Fort Henry was in souri and Tennessee and Kentucky and Virginia—though ten thousand armed men have been captured at Donelson, are to-day stronger than they were when Fort Henry was in their possession. This may appear at first like a broad and untrue assertion, but it stands to reason, and this is the reasoning: First, they are positively strong in their own-concentrated position, near the source of suppiles, in a country where forces can be hurriedly concentrated for any effort, and where they are being concentrated. Secondly, they derive strength, negatively, from the fact that we are necessarily weakened as we lengthen the distance between our armies and their sources of supply. The robels were weak in the distance between our armies and their sources of supply. The rebels were weak in their former lines because so unconnected. They assumed them for the purpose of drawing their supplies from the States in which the lines were laid, and when they left them they were left desolated. It was a terrible price to pay, but the absence of the confederates was well worth a good price. When they left it was a terrible price to back. It was a terrible price to back. It was a terrible price to against foreign enomies; against its own citizens when in rebellion, as fully as against the subjects of the remotest nation of the earth. It thus gives it the power so to wage wars without any limitation or restriction; and of course, authorises it to carry them on by the exercise of all the powers and means authorized by the law of nations. It is an axiom of jurisprodence that the grant of a power to do a thing, is a grant of the power to employ all the means necessary to do that thing. The right of a constable to take a defendant if that be necessary to the taking of his liberty and property; to do all those acts which the law of war, as a part of the law of the liberty and property; to do all those acts which the law of war, as a part of the law of works, and we in the meantine are too ware the work of the contractions and works, and we in the meantine are too ware the contraction of the contraction o

The concentrations against Gen. Smith are most formidable and threatening, and demand It is said that these are the finest troops in the Confederacy, and are 10,000 strong. The whole force thus concentrated against Gen. Smith will aggregate not less than 50,000 men—probably double his force. Unless Gen. Halleck pushes Gen. Buell forward, Gen. Smith may be overcome, and we may meet with a terrible reverse. At any rate, troops will have to be poured in upon Gen. Smith. ANOTHER LETTER. Nasivuluz, Tenn., 26th March, 1992.

What interest, commercial, social or agricultural, causéd Nashville to spring into existence. I cannot imagine. Just above shoals in the Cumberland river, which for more than half the year obstruct navigation and restrict commerce, in la region of hills and daise that render it difficult of approach, and surrounded by a country which it is almost impossible to cultivate with profit, it is difficult to see what caused the place to be located where it is. To the location of the seat of State government here is due, of course, much of its prosperity. The city has apparently grown up among the rocks, pretty much as the numerous cedar trees in the suburbs around it have sprung forth, covering the summits of the numerous Nashville, Tenn., 26th March, 1862 rees in the suburos around to the numerous orth, covering the summits of the numerous ills which in some measure overlook the city, which is often called, as you are aware to the control of the called, as you are aware to the called the calle city, which is often called, as you are analy, Wherever you gaze and in whatever season it may be, you see the everlasting evergreens, the cedars. They grow on the sides of the rocky hills, and spring up between the rugged gray and moss covered rocks. They grow to an unusual size. Many of the groves of cedars are almost forests in dimensions, and the trees grow from twenty-five to forty feet in height. The lawns of the numerous fine residences are filled with them. The smaller trees are used for the purposes of hedges—as the orange shrub is sometimes used in the same way. Many of these cedar groves are exceedingly beautiful, and much taste and care render many of the lawns in which the richer residences plant them in profusion, exceedingly handsome and stylish.

Yery little of the land immediately about Nashville is under cultivation, particularly south of the river. The farms are all small, er you gaze and in whatever season the bitterest of the women—and the gentle sex were the litterest of the two—have cooled down and the general expression is that they are glad it is over." When I first heard the remark, the lady said "she was glad we had come." Knowing how/undictive she had been at first, I was surprised. The explanation was that "they had long known that we would eventually get here; that we had such an overwhelming army that we must succeed, &c." They seemed to have dreaded the transition from one master to the other. They have found the new master an easy and Induigent but most determined one, and they appear to be content.

There are no "burn your cotton" and "die in the last ditch" men in this vicinity—at least we have found none. Farticularly are the former caree. We did not capture a large amount of the "great staple," but it is coming to market, not in large quantities, but that was not to be expected here. The southern papers said we had taken about 50,000 bales. I don't suppose we have taken 5,000 bales. I don't suppose we have taken 5,000.

warehouses. Apropos of derstand from a friend Review had an elaborate interesting account of his visit to Manassa, and the battle field of Boll Run. A farmer residing near Centervile told him that in Jan-ary last a number of regiments were qua-ried near his house, among them one from Kertucky, and when the time of their enlist-tering expired they maniformly resolved to Kertucky, and when the time of their enist-ment expired they unanimously resolved to return home, and accordingly stacked their arms and were preparing for a start, when their further progress was arrested by the ap-pearance of an Alabama and a Tennessee regi-tinent, who were ordered to reduce the Ken-tuckians to submission, and compel them to remain. The Kentuckians seized their arms and a desperate fight casued, in which many were slain on both sides, and their bodies were buried where they fail, the graves being rere buried where they feil, the graves being et visible. From this spot the matincers etreated a short distance, thraw down their rms, and each drawing his bowie knife made desperate charge upon the two regiments.

Resumption of Inland Trade.

a general resumption of the lake trade madated from the lat of April, as the water now so generally free from lee that eve straits of Mackinaw will doubtless be nable within a few days. Although the effective of the latest property of the lake trade madate property of the latest pro carliest practicable period of the season. The unprecedented necessities of Europe will continue all through this year, as during the last, to crow it these channels, as well as the relicions, with the surplus products of the West, at freight rates which will this year again most amply repay all concerned in forwarding, by land and water. Much as the railroads may continue to do, their capacity is inconsiderable in comparison with the avalanche of grain and previsions pouring through the canals and lakes.

The additions to the canal and lake fleets, though largely made since last fail, will supply this vast demand less perfectly than superficial observers may suppose, for many of the new vessels are required—on the canals particularly—to replace those now unfitted for the trade. It is, therefore, scarcely probable that freighting will, this year, be much cheapened from last year's laverage.

Let no one be delided by the notion that the probable opening of the southern ports will diminish our New York trade in the great essentials which now form the chief bulk of our foreign commerce. The immense stores of grain—the provisions of all kinds—which are now required for Europe, cannot find outlet through the southern waters. Nature and necessity decide that important politics.

last night from the rebel side of James river, arriving at our camps i little before midulcht. They were kindly received and cared for by Capt. Beerg, officer of the day. The men had been impressed into the service on the batteries, and took this, their first opportunity, to escape from the virtual slavery in which they had been held. They state that the most intense excitement existed at and around Smith-field, Smfolk and Norfolk, for several weeks after the capture of Rosnoke Island, and that General Magruder had sent fifteen thousand of his troops from the peninsula to protect the railroad connecting. Norfolk with Petersburg. All these troops have since recrossed the river.

The Morrimac is expected every day to make her reappearance. It is reported that she has now on board a fifteen-inch rified gun that throws a three hundred and sixty pound conical shot with steel points. She suffered terribly in the engagement with the Monitor, and the report that she returned to Norfolk in a sink-

On the 30th instant, Sergeant C. W. Redman, of Company H. Third Missour! Voinn teers, arrived from Rolls with Col. Shepar and guard, having in charge the prisoners from Pen Ridge. Sergeant Redman has since distinguished himself by conduct exhibiting fa more shrewtheses, impudence and love of country. On Tneeday, Mr. McCiannen, Mr. Jennings, and two or three other citizens residing several miles from the city, on the Bellefontaine road, made complaint at the Provost Marshal's office that a U. S. Sergeant and six privates, estensibly acting under-regular orders, had 'visited and searched their premises, and, after esting various sums of money and other valuables, had departed without giving any further explanation of their conduct than that they were obeying orders. The description of the Sergeant was too general to promise his speedy detection, and it was even questionable if he were reality at U. S. officer. Steps were, however, taken with a view of discovering and arresting the roops. On the day after these steps were initiated, an officer claiming to be Sergeant Reed, presented himself at the headquarters of Major McConnell, commanding the Provost Guard, on Sixth near Morgam street, and exhibited an order, purporting t be signed by Provost Marshall Leighton, for a detail of six men to accompany the said Reed at once, upon particularly pressing and important business. A perusul of the document satisfied Major McConnell that it was a blunder or a forgery, and he accordingly ordered an officer to proceed with the applicant to the Provost Marshall soffice. On the way over, 'Sergeant Reed, presented it to Lieutenant Ashton, who perceived it to be increased to grant it. Not knowing of the previous affair of the kind, the Lieutenant did not order the man and presented it to Lieutenant Ashton, who perceived it to be increased to great it moment. By the present laws buildings and personal property alone are liable for unpaid water taxes, and the method carries with it a vast deal of inconvenience and dissatisfaction, the rocess being slow and permitting no benefit of redemption, creating vexation and other evils. To remedy this it is proposed that the water tax be reduced in amount, and that all lots which are benefitted by the laying of water pipes in their vicinity be taxed, whether the lots are occupied or not. This the Secre-tery considers a more equable adjustment, from the fact that Chicago is more widely Mr. Wenthworth wanted it put over antiscreenber, only. This was finally amended

The Frovision market during the week has been inactive, but there is a better feeling in product macave, out there is a better feeling in product generally and a decided improvement in some kinds. Mass Poux.—In the early part of the week there was but little inquiry, and the market fell to $10.50, at which price several round lots changed hands. Within the past two or three days, how ver, the market has improved slightly, and sales were made at $10.75, at which price the market closes stongt. Exallary Marks—The auroli to ioses steady. Exclish MEATS—The supply is early exhausted, and under and active request. the market shows an advance of Mc per B.—closing firm at 5% for Short Hib and 5% for Short Borfless Middles. There are no Long Middles here and no sales. Bulk Meats—There is also a better feeting in Bolk Meats than prevailed a week age, and the market is firmer, but without any decided improvement.—closing at 363% for loose shoulders; 464% for loose Hans, and 4% 4% for Sides. Larus—The demand for Lard, under an improvement is the East, has been very active, and we note an advance of Mc per B.—closing firm, with sales of prime kettle-rendered load at 7% 67%; c prime steam at 7c; and No. 1 Lard at 6% 66% c. Grazze—In good demand and scarce, at 56 for Yellow, and 5% for White. the market shows an advance of 5c per B-clos-
